ARCHERY

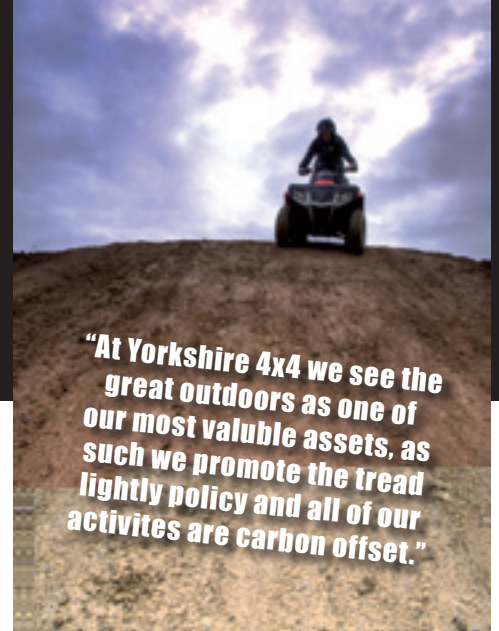

Anyone familiar with the legend of Robin Hood knows archery competitions date back at least to mediaeval times. Equipment and technology has evolved since Robin and his Merry Men had the run of Sherwood Forest, but the skills needed for the historic sport of archery remain essentially unchanged, stamina, steady hands, sharp eyes and nerves of steel will all be required if you are to master this ancient craft.

TARGET SHOOTING

Target Shooting requires concentration, self-discipline and great control. Despite what you may have seen in the movies, over excitement will make any possibility of hitting the bulls-eye a remote one. A great leveller, which doesn't reward strength, but patience and accuracy. With targets to suit all abilities and high quality rifles and scopes, this rewarding discipline is ideal for those who excel under pressure
